

sociable media®

// Special Web Seminar edition

May 2005

IN THIS ISSUE

- Seminar recording now online
- $5 off the Add-In for attendees
- Download a copy of the slides
- Get the answers to your question
- How to book speaking sessions
- Stay connected to the community

PDF //

LiveMeeting Web Seminar Edition

In case you missed my May 12 web seminar, "Transform Your PowerPoint Beyond Bullet Points," in this special web seminar edition you can view a recording of the presentation, download a special PDF copy of selected slides, and receive a special $5 off of the Add-In for PowerPoint. The session went well - 1,752 people attended, and the response was extremely positive.

View the seminar recording with a media player, or scroll through all 161 slides

You can view the recording of the May 12 web seminar in two ways at this web page (Recording ID: Seminar11 and Attendee key: 650650). Click the top link "Microsoft Office LiveMeeting Replay" to view the audio and video, using the media player to advance, forward or pause the recording. Or, click the second link "Basic Recording with per-slide audio" to scroll through all 161 slides - this shows the individual slide layouts, and how I built the animation over the sequence of slides.

Structure your stories faster with the Add-In for PowerPoint - $5 off for attendees!

During the seminar I described how you can write your script using a Word document. Another option is to write your story completely within PowerPoint using a unique Story Editor included in the Sociable Media PowerPoint Add-In. When you're done writing, simply click a button and you have an instant, pre-formatted storyboard. I worked with NetCentrics, an experienced Microsoft developer, to incorporate many of the ideas in Beyond Bullet Points into the Add-In to save you time. To receive $5 off for seminar attendees, or try it at no cost for 30 days, click here.

Download a special copy of the LiveMeeting presentation

In addition to viewing the recording as described above (with the media player or by scrolling through the 161 slides), I'm also glad to share the Word story template that I used for the presentation, as well as my initial PPT storyboard. As an added bonus, I've prepared a special PDF of the Notes Page view of the slides from the "5-minute version," so you can see an example of the BBP approach in practice - download it here (1.5 MB). Unfortunately I can't provide the complete PPT file, but if you have special requests or want training on how to do it, contact me.

Get answers to 25 of your questions in the discussion board, or ask some new ones

Thanks for your great questions during the seminar - I wish I were able to make a presentation and answer questions simultaneously, but the best I could do was to answer 25 of them in the special seminar discussion area here. They cover topics such as presenting complex information, and the sources of the research and quotations I used. If your question is not posted or answered on the board, please post it and I'll be glad to answer it there.

"How do I book Cliff to speak in-person or at a web seminar for my organization?"

I received a number requests for in-person workshops or presentations, and I'm happy to put together a proposal if you contact me here. If you enjoyed the online presentation format, I also conduct online workshops. For smaller groups, we can share documents online and actually write your story and create your storyboard during the session. If you're interested, let me know>

Join the Beyond Bullets community and stay charged with fresh ideas and resources

There are a number of very exciting new services coming up, so if you liked the session and want to stay connected to a steady supply of ideas and resources, keep in touch! The best way is to subscribe to the newsletter, or if you want more regular contact, you can subscribe to my blog (signup in the right-hand column, or by RSS) or subscribe to the discussion board feeds (on a per-post basis, or by RSS). We can only change our PowerPoint culture if we do it together!